

Pursuing Innovation to Benefit the Health of Canadians

Sanofi Canada Recognized as One of Canada's Top R&D Investors

Montreal, Quebec – January 26, 2017 – Sanofi Canada is pleased to announce that it ranks among Canada's Top 100 Corporate Research and Development (R&D) Spenders, according to a new report published by Research Infosource Inc.

The Laval-based healthcare partner invested $133.3 million in R&D in fiscal 2015, ranking third amongst Canadian companies for overall R&D spend as a percentage of revenue (19.2%). Sanofi Canada's investment, which is focused on developing innovative therapies in areas such as oncology, diabetes and cardiology, also establishes the company as one of the top three R&D spenders within the Canadian healthcare industry, and figures among the top 25 in the country.

“Sanofi Canada is honoured to be recognized for its longstanding commitment to supporting a robust and dynamic research and development community in Canada,” said Niven Al-Khoury, General Manager at Sanofi Canada. “The scientific community is at a pivotal point in Canada, at a time when our healthcare needs have never been greater. Being recognized as one of the country's top investors in R&D speaks to our commitment to providing patients with innovative treatments, and innovation must remain a priority if we are to empower life both today and in the future.”

Sanofi's broad range of R&D priorities include diabetes, cardiology, vaccines, rare diseases and oncology.
