Campaign to Control Cancer Kicks off The People vs. Cancer Speaking Tour

TORONTO, Sept. 14, 2011 /CNW Telbec/ - The Campaign to Control Cancer (C2CC) is proud to launch The People vs. Cancer Speaking Tour featuring Stephen Lewis, former Canadian Ambassador to the United Nations and United Nations Special Envoy for HIV/AIDS in Africa. Mr. Lewis will encourage young people to take a leadership role in the fight against cancer and address the moral imperative for Canadian leadership. The speaking tour is inspired by the United Nation's first Global Summit on Noncommunicable Diseases being held September 19-20, 2011 in New York City. The only other UN summit to focus on a global health issue was the HIV/AIDS summit in 2001.

One in three Canadians will face a cancer diagnosis in their lifetime. The C2CC estimates that cancer rates can be cut in half in one generation simply by acting on and implementing what we know already in areas like tobacco control, maintaining a healthy weight and diet, regular physical activity, limiting alcohol consumption, avoiding tanning beds and UV exposure, and screening at-risk and vulnerable populations.
