

Allerject™ publicly listed in AB, MB, QC, NS, PEI and on NIHB formulary

LAVAL, June 21, 2013 - Sanofi is pleased to report that Allerject™ – the new epinephrine auto-injector available in Canada – has been listed on the public formularies of Alberta, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. Allerject™ has also been approved for listing on the Non-Insured Health Benefits (NIHB) program which provides coverage to the First Nations and Inuit population.

“We are pleased with the continued positive formulary listings for Allerject™, as it is an important step for patient access and choice for those living with severe, life-threatening allergies,” says Jon Fairest, President and CEO of Sanofi Canada.

Earlier this year, Allerject™ was included in the public formularies of British Columbia and Saskatchewan. With the current additions, the coverage for Allerject™ spans seven provinces across Canada.

“We are committed to continue working with provincial health agencies so that Allerject™ is available under each of the province’s public drug plans and to ensure that there is equal access across the country to this emergency treatment option for Canadians living with severe allergies,” says Mr. Fairest.

Allerject™ was designed to address unmet patient needs and make a positive difference in the lives of those with severe allergies. It is the first epinephrine auto-injector with automated voice instructions designed to help people correctly use the device. Allerject™ ‘talks’ people step-by-step through the injection process.
